Contributors

Khagendra Acharya is a Lecturer at the Department of Languages and Mass Communication in Kathmandu University, where he teaches Philosophy, Public Relations and Communication Skills. His research interests are implication of collage in literature, trauma and media, and postmodern theories especially their relation to creative writing. His scholarly and popular articles have appeared in journals and various newspapers. His book Theorizing Collage in Literature is in print. At present, he is working on the nature of trauma representation in Nepali novels on Maoist war. Email: khagendra@ku.edu.np.

Nirmala Mani Adhikary is Asst. Professor of Media Studies at the Dept. of Languages and Mass Communication in Kathmandu University. Formerly, he was Head of the Dept. of Mass Communication and Journalism in MBM College, Kathmandu and Director of Communication Study Center (CSC). Besides, he worked in the field of print and online journalism in various capacities including the editor, executive editor, news editor, and feature editor. Adhikary has authored/edited 27 books. He has contributed about two-dozen research articles in scholarly journals and anthologies, and hundreds of analytical articles in newspapers and magazines. Email: nma@ku.edu.np

Deepak Aryal is a researcher at Madan Puraskar Pustakalaya, Kathmandu and teaches Journalism at MBM College, Kathmandu. He has contributed research articles for journals and anthologies and co-authored two books. Email: deepakaryal@gmail.com

Sten T. Brand, Norway, is a visiting Lecturer in Media Studies at the Department of Language and Mass Communication. Previously he worked in online media and television channels in the USA and Norway. He did his Masters’ Thesis on Constituent Assembly Election of Nepal. Email: stenbrand@gmail.com

Bodhi, 3 (1), 125-127. ISSN 2091-0479. © 2009 Kathmandu University
Janga B. Chauhan is Professor and Head of the Department of Languages and Mass Communication, Kathmandu University. Besides regular contribution of articles to scholarly Journals and weekly/daily newspapers, his publications include books on literature. Email: janchau@ku.edu.np

Hem Raj Kafle is Asst. Professor of English at the Department of Languages and Mass Communication in Kathmandu University. His research interests include such Interdisciplinary areas as literature, diaspora, media, and history. He is also a Ph. D. scholar, and is carrying out research on the rhetorical study of the editorials of Nepali English dailies. He has been contributing articles to scholarly journals, anthologies, and newspapers. Email: hrk@ku.edu.np

Indra Dhoj Kshetri teaches journalism at the College of Journalism and Mass Communication, Kathmandu. Formerly, he was a news editor in Nepal Television. He is currently carrying out research on ‘Coverage of the Maoist rise to power in Nepal’. He has authored two books. Email: gentleindra@hotmail.com

Jae-won Lee is Professor Emeritus at Cleveland State University, U.S.A. He specializes in news-journalism and political communication studies. For years, he was Director of Journalism program and Curricular Affairs at his university. He visited KU in the summer of 2008 as a Fulbright Senior Specialist. His co-author, Leo W. Jeffres teaches at the School of Communication, Cleveland State University. Emails: j.lee@csuohio.edu, l.jeffres@csuohio.edu

Lopita Nath is Asst. Professor at the Department of History in the University of the Incarnate Word, San Antonio, Texas, USA. Formerly, she taught at Cotton College, Guwahati, India. Her teaching and research interests focus on Asian and World History, Migration Studies and Human Rights in Asia as well as the History and Politics of South Asia. She is the author of the book The Nepalis in Assam: Ethnicity and Cross Border

Bodhi, 3 (1), 125-127. ISSN 2091-0479. © 2009 Kathmandu University
Movements in the North East, and has a number of research works on Nepalis of Assam. Email: nath@uiwtx.edu.

Laxman Datt Pant teaches journalism at the Department of Languages and Mass Communication in Kathmandu University. He has been the visiting faculty of development journalism in Dhaka University, Bangladesh. Pant has authored half a dozen of books in different disciplines of journalism. He writes on current affairs in The Rising Nepal under his weekly column ‘Reminder’. Email: laxmankasyap@gmail.com

Ram Chandra Paudel is a Lecturer at the Department of Languages and Mass Communication in Kathmandu University. He teaches Nepali and Eastern philosophy. His research interests are Vedic philosophy and Sanskrit and Nepali literature.

Krishna Poudel is a geographer associated with Tribhuvan University, and is a visiting faculty at the Department of Languages and Mass Communication, Kathmandu University. Email: kpoudel_pokhara@yahoo.co.uk